

PEDIATRIC PRACTICE TRANSFORMATION

Improving Healthcare Service Design and Delivery for 0-to-5 Year Olds

We know that 80% to 90% of brain development happens before a child's fifth birthday. We also know early experiences, from age zero through five, can shape brain architecture and establish a base for the development and behavior that follows. Physicians, practitioners, community health centers, and pediatric practices are key players in the developmentally critical first five years of a child's life.

Docs for Tots recognizes the challenges that practitioners like you face, as well as the systemic disparities that impact the children and families you serve. Docs For Tots helps early childhood health practitioners and providers make best practice everyday practice. Our tools and resources help overcome these challenges, save time and money, and help you provide high-quality health care.

"Docs for Tots provides concrete supports that align with what we as healthcare providers need. The help is hands-on, not telling you what you should do, but helping you figure out how to succeed in making practice better."

A strong first five can create a strong forever. We can make sure New York's youngest have the high-quality care they deserve. Together.

Who We Are

Docs for Tots is New York's only pediatrician-led organization bridging the gaps between practice, policy, and parents. We work with all players involved in a child's first five years—dads, doctors, decision makers—to foster children's healthy development from ages zero to five and thereby, their future health and success.

What We Do

Docs for Tots works across sectors breaking down silos and forging partnerships; strengthening systems and expanding access; tracking progress and championing data-informed policies, so every child in New York, prenatal through pre-k, can access the high quality services and care they need to meet their developmental milestones.
